DNS Lookup Description: DNS Lookup Profile: DNS Lookup Profile: DNS Lookup Screen: Cacti is a cross-platform solution that allows you to monitor and manage your network's performance from one account. It enables you to investigate many parameters, such as ping statistics, down-link and up-link bandwidth and time, and other performance metrics. Using the program you can also view graphs for a specified time period. Cacti is not just another monitoring software for you to collect data and store them in a local database. The tool is mainly designed to help you solve performance issues you're encountering with applications, websites, email and other network interactions. Instead of spending time and money on trying to find the right software to do the job for you, Cacti gives you a plethora of useful functions that can help you in better understanding how your network is performing. Multiple high-level metrics Although Cacti will profile the network in many ways, each metric shows a specific amount of information. The program monitors pings, bandwidth, downtime, latency and traceroute stats, as well as the number of TCP and UDP open connections. In order to select the metrics you need, you can easily select your activity, such as web browsing, FTP downloads and other relevant events. The program also provides an interface to adjust specific settings, such as displaying local or remote metrics and setting bandwidth thresholds. Graphical interface The appearance of Cacti is unlike most other programs. It consists of a horizontal bar graph displaying the current status of your network. Aside from the graph, it also shows a few statistics about your data, such as: Number of queries per second Number of bytes per second Size The rest of the interface consists of two side-bars, one for each side of the graph. The left shows an overview of the metrics, while the right contains a list of the graphs for the set periods. They can be dragged to the desired position to fit on the screen, and can be edited to show additional information about graphs in other periods. Every graph is color-coded and depicts the current and previous values of the corresponding metric, as well as the overall trends, both up and down. Bottom line Cacti gives you more than enough tools to monitor your network's performance without spending much time and money. Its intuitive and graph-based interface allows you to quickly get
