Boris FX Sapphire, in, after Effects, Adobe After Effects, after EffectsQ: Does the need to decompress an archive get slower as the number of objects it contains grows? I'm currently working on a project where I want to archive lots of data of the order of billions of objects. The archive is stored by using compression (lz4 or xz). The problem I'm trying to solve is that I want to read as little as possible. More specifically I can use a tar file as input and my code has to compress it and extract it. At the moment I'm using GNU Tar and its -k flag for reading archives. However, if I expect my file to be big my results are not satisfactory. Here are some sample commands : $ > ls -lZ myArchive.tar.lz4 -rwxr-xr-x 1 root root 17G Jun 26 17:06 myArchive.tar.lz4 $ file myArchive.tar.lz4 myArchive.tar.lz4: LZ4 compressed data, version LZ4v1 $ file -ib myArchive.tar.lz4 myArchive.tar.lz4: LZ4 compressed data, version LZ4v1, delta compression, maximum size = 512 MiB And here is a command that should compress and extract the same archive : $ tar t -kxvf myArchive.tar.lz4 extracting to file myArchive.tar.lz4 $ file myArchive.tar.lz4 myArchive.tar.lz4: LZ4 compressed data, version LZ4v1 The results are good because myArchive.tar.lz4 will be a tar file with about 15MB size. I just need to extract it and have the data ready to 1cb139a0ed
