As a device for moving or transporting a workpiece in a process of manufacturing a semiconductor device, a device using a conveying line in which a workpiece is conveyed by a motor is widely used. In the case of continuously manufacturing a semiconductor device by using such conveying line, from an inlet of a conveying section to an outlet of the conveying section, a first conveying section, a second conveying section, a third conveying section, a photoresist processing section, a developing section, a rinse section, a drying section, a stepper and so on are connected in series. Such conveying line is called a long-type conveying line. In the case of manufacturing the semiconductor device, because the long-type conveying line is used, it is unavoidable to employ a plurality of large and heavy conveying equipment such as a transport table, a conveying line, a transport robot, an inspecting apparatus and so on. Therefore, since a facility or a manufacturing line in which the long-type conveying line is provided is large-scaled, it is not easy to reduce the facility or the manufacturing line in size, and the facility or the manufacturing line has to be designed such that it is strong enough to be able to handle a large amount of workpiece. Therefore, in order to reduce the facility or the
